For most of us, our time on the water comes at a premium, so having the proper angling tools and accessories is an essential element in improving our efficiency and effectiveness on the water, and our ability to safely handle and release fish.

Up to 80 percent of the fish we catch, we release. They are either undersized, oversized, out of season, or an undesirable or disrespected species. Regardless of the reason, catch and release is very important to survival of our fishery and our sport, and the ARC Dehooker is a tool every angler should have with them on the water. The ARC Dehooker allows anglers to release any species of fish without touching them, which is safer for them, and great for the fish. Made of stainless steel, the dehooker's unique design allows for a quick and easy release, therefore improving your efficiency.
